I have received a complaint from a member of the public concerning videos which were shown. My attention was also drawn to a simulated oral sex display behind the white sheet which you had fixed in the North Aisle.
I have previously talked to you about the showing of videos during East Orange and am angry to have to bring this matter up again. This kind of activity is completely unacceptable.

On Saturday, April 26, 1834, Thomas Morris, aged twenty-three, of Guisborough, labourer, was executed for having committed a rape on Mary Loue, of Skelton, a girl only twelve years of age. Thomas Rodgers, aged thirty-two, was executed for having committed an unnatural crime, at Sheffield, on the person of Charles Bennett, a boy, only fourteen years of age. And Charles Cook, aged twenty, was executed for having committed an assault upon James Richardson, the driver of a fish cart, and putting him in danger of his life, and for stealing from his person the sum of £3.12.0, and other articles. Rodgers and Morris were two young men of prepossessing appearance, but there was something in the countenance of Cook which appeared ferocious. On Cook being asked if he had anything to say, "I have seen you before—I have nothing to say to you!" In the seventh hour he testified a spirit of revenge. The three prisoners testified all continued firm in their protestations of innocence. Rodgers was visited on Friday by his brother and his brother's wife, and Cook also had an interview with his wife, mother, brother, and three sisters. All the parties appeared greatly affected.
